Our Sites

We invite you and your scout group to visit our sites and participate in Coastal Heritage Society's exciting field trip programs! We operate six unique museums and historic sites in Savannah, GA: Savannah History Museum & Battlefield Memorial Park, Georgia State Railroad Museum, Savannah Children's Museum, Old Fort Jackson, Pin Point Heritage Museum and Harper Fowlkes House.

Savannah History Museum is housed in the former Central of Georgia Railway passenger shed, a National Historic Landmark built in the 1860s and 1870s. Coastal Heritage Society took over operation of Savannah History Museum in 1990. The museum is home to more than 10,000 artifacts-- the largest collection of artifacts in the entire coastal community. Battlefield Memorial Park, adjacent to the History Museum, commemorates the site where 800 soldiers were either killed or wounded on October 9th, 1779 in one of the deadliest battles of the American Revolution. More than 8,000 troops, from what are now eight modern countries, clashed for control of the city of Savannah. The combined French and American force failed to extract it from British control.

Georgia State Railroad Museum is the site of the former Central of Georgia Railroad Savannah Repair Shops, and a vibrant part of Savannah's industrial heritage. Construction began on the site in 1851 and the majority of buildings were completed by 1855. The Civil War brought damage and destruction to the Central of Georgia Railroad, but soon after the war the Central was back in full operation. It was reorganized in 1895 and renamed Central of Georgia Railway. The Central used this site until 1963.

Savannah Children's Museum Savannah Children's Museum is a one-acre, two-level outdoor educational space featuring over a dozen interactive exhibits and activities designed to offer an open exploration experience and to expand the imaginations of children ages 18 months to 10 years. The museum was unveiled as an adaptive reuse project in 2012 in the historic Central of Georgia Railway Carpentry Shop.

Old Fort Jackson, named after Revolutionary War hero James Jackson, was built to defend the port of Savannah from attack via the river. In 1777 & 1778, there was an earthen artillery battery located on the site. During the administration of President Thomas Jefferson, the United States began building a series of coastal fortifications, including Fort Jackson, to provide for the defense of major rivers and harbors along the east coast.

Pin Point Heritage Museum is located just off the Diamond Causeway in the recently restored A.S. Varn & Son Oyster and Crab Factory on the Moon River. The Museum shares the story of the Pin Point Community founded in 1890 by freed slaves, many from Ossabaw Island. Pin Point Heritage Museum, with its more than 3,000 square feet of exhibition space, artifacts and interactive displays, helps to tell the story of the history, traditions, language, spiritual life, and culture of the community.

Harper Fowlkes House is an 1842 Greek Revival mansion located on Orleans Square in downtown Savannah. Alida Harper Fowlkes left her home to the Society of the Cincinnati in the State of Georgia to be used as their state headquarters. She wanted future generations to see the lifestyle of the mid-1800s, including the home's richly furnished interiors, important oil portraits, original architectural details and period antiques.

All of our programs are based on the Georgia Standards of Excellence and are age- and grade-specific. Each offers an engaging, interactive and fun educational experience for visitors of all ages. If you have any special needs, please speak with one of us. With sufficient notice, we can tailor our programs to meet the needs of your group. We hope to see you soon!

GEORGIA STATE
RAILROAD MUSEUM

Georgia State Railroad Museum is located at the former Central of Georgia Railway Savannah Repair Shops and is a vibrant part of Savannah's industrial heritage. Construction began on the site in 1851 and the shops soon flourished as engines and rolling stock were built and repaired there. The Civil War brought damage and destruction to the railroad, but by 1895, the renamed Central of Georgia Railway was reorganized and fully operational. The Central used this site until 1963. Coastal Heritage Society offers two special Boy Scout Programs at Georgia State Railroad Museum.

Georgia State Railroad Museum Boy Scout Program

During this one-hour program, scouts will learn about the important contributions of railroads to the development of Georgia and the United States. Scouts will explore the former railroad facility that now houses our museum and see firsthand equipment, locomotives, and railcars, which will help them understand how steam power and industrialization changed American life. The museum's historic buildings, making up the largest, most complete pre-Civil War railroad complex in the United States, will help scouts to conceptualize the many moving parts of a railroad, from planning, construction, and daily operation to expansion, innovation, and even advertising.

Girl Scouts will learn about young Juliette and her family members as well as about the daily lives of American soldiers in the 19th century. During the program, scouts can also learn about Civil War medicine, be trained to send messages with Signal Corps flags and by telegraph, and taught to work together as a cannon crew. Scouts will learn about the life cycles of the marsh and human impacts on the local environment, particularly wetlands. Scouts will also view the award-winning film Take Me to the Water, which features real Pin Point community members speaking about their experiences growing up in a community founded over 100 years ago by freedmen, many of whom had once been enslaved on nearby Ossabaw Island. Scouts will also learn about Gullah culture, participating in activities which touch on Gullah foodways, music, language, and more.

To begin this 75-minute program, scouts will tour Harper-Fowlkes House, an 1840s Greek Revival mansion owned for over 40 years by preservationist and businesswoman Alida Harper Fowlkes. Scouts will learn how Alida's dreams and determination decided the fate of the house and the objects in it, as well as the fates of several other properties in the city. Scouts will examine why Alida chose the historic objects she chose, and what can be learned about the house, the city, and the community from studying the home and its contents. Scouts will end their program looking at real historic items in Coastal Heritage Society Working Collections to determine which items they would choose for a historical exhibit or for an antique business like one once owned and operated by Alida. During this activity, scouts will also get a behind-the-scenes look at museum operations and what decisions go into the making of exhibits, the management of a museum business, and the care and preservation of objects.
